A TERRIBLE CRIME.

Manda Franklin Outraged. Manda Franklin, a mulatto and the wife of Dick Franklin, also a mulatto, living near S. H. Wilson's, about five miles east of Hazel Green, was waylaid and brutally outraged by the notorious James Felix Cockrill, a negro who has been living in this community for about three years, and who bears an unenviable reputation.

The particulars of the case as near as we can get at them, are about as follows. Manda-had gone about a mile from home on an errand, and upon her return was confronted by Cockrill, who had hid by the roadside and awaited her return. As she saw him she started to run, knowing his evil nature, but was overtaken and seized by him with one hand. He made an indecent proposition to her, which she resented, and told her he would kill her if she did not submit. She replied that he could kill. He fired but did not hit her. The shot, however, scared her so badly that she dropped to the ground.
